Northwest Plumbing, Heating & AC Introduces Furnace Repair Diagnostic Upgrades Ahead of Quad Cities Cold Season

August 17, 2026

DAVENPORT, Iowa - August 17, 2026 -

As the Quad Cities region experiences its first significant temperature drops of the season, Northwest Plumbing, Heating & AC has introduced updated diagnostic equipment and expanded technician training to support furnace repair and installation as demand rises. The company is advising area homeowners to schedule heating system inspections before peak winter conditions arrive, a step intended to reduce the emergency breakdowns that often accompany severe cold.

The seasonal heating work includes furnace repair and installation, annual heating system checks, boiler repair and installation, humidifier installation, and high-efficiency heating system upgrades. The company reports that its newly introduced diagnostic equipment and ongoing technician training are aimed at addressing a broad range of winter home comfort issues. Technicians carry experience with major brands and models of residential heating equipment, allowing them to service systems across the region.

Northwest Plumbing, Heating & AC has served the Quad Cities since 1923, and this winter marks another season of its preparedness efforts. The company maintains 24-hour emergency service availability to address urgent heating failures that can occur during severe weather.

"Winter in the Quad Cities can arrive quickly, and a heating system that struggles on the first cold night often shows warning signs well before it fails," said Bill Durand, a representative of Northwest Plumbing, Heating & AC. "Scheduling an inspection early gives homeowners the chance to address small issues before they turn into emergencies during the coldest part of the season."

Beyond heating, the company provides year-round plumbing support, including water heater repair and installation, drain cleaning, sewer repair, camera inspection, sump pump service, and leak repair. These plumbing capabilities give households a single resource for essential home systems throughout the year.

The company's Service Partner Agreements provide preventative maintenance plans that include scheduled visits, priority service scheduling, and waived after-hours fees. These agreements are structured to identify potential issues before they develop into major repairs. The company also runs a Deal of the Month program, offering seasonal pricing on home services throughout the year.

As noted in a recent news article covering seasonal service trends, heating system reliability becomes especially relevant during the winter months, when home comfort and safety depend on functioning equipment. Northwest Plumbing Heating & AC reports that service calls for heating evaluations typically increase alongside the season's first sustained cold spells.

"Preventative maintenance remains one of the more practical steps a homeowner can take heading into winter," Durand said. "Regular attention to a furnace extends its service life and keeps it running efficiently when it is needed most."

Northwest Plumbing, Heating & AC is a locally owned company based in the Quad Cities area. Founded in 1923, the company provides residential plumbing, heating, and cooling services, including installation, repair, and maintenance. The company also offers financing options and maintains a presence on social media, where it shares seasonal maintenance information and heating system care advice.
